that, in dealance of the limits of the the throught of the large of the election. Bright and Fitch, of Indiana, claiming to have been elected to the U.S. Senate by the Indiana legislatine, have been admitted to seatably a vote of the Senate. The diremmentance of the election, so called, are no doubt well remonahered. In the Indiana Senate there was an anti-Democratic majority, and that hody, as such, refused to go into the election of U.S. Senators; but the majority of the lower House, together with auch of the individuals of the upper one as were willing to go into an election, voted for Bright and Fitch. The claim was thereupon set up that Messra. B. and F., having received the votes of a majority of all the members of the two Houses, were legally elected, notwithstanding the refusal of one branch, as such to participate in the voting. No such assumption was ever before made upon any similar occasion in the country.
